Bring your favorite 8-10 year old girl to this unique hands-on class and author-signing exploring empowerment for girls with the caring adults in their lives, based on the children's fable by local self-help author Marjorie Baker Price, Merinda and the Magic Mirror: A Tiny Tale of Transformation, just published through Productivity Publications. The book is available online at Amazon.com and other online bookstores, as well as to order at any bookstore across the country.

This is a creating and sharing class for girls and their favorite adults to find a "magic mirror within" through special crafts, writing and drawing exercises; and reading the story of Merinda, which presents a "good little girl" who struggles to please and cope with bullying. She is taken on a magical journey to "the world up above" where she discovers the wonder of who and what she is, and her own empowered self.

"This wonderful fable offers a simple, central way for young girls to learn to find and develop their own sense of self and trust, to stand up to bullying and the many external pressures in a challenging and risky world, and empower themselves." – Lou Bivona, Chairman and founder NCMEC/NY Bivona Child Advocacy Center
